The Honourable Ed Fast
Minister of International Trade
Government of Canada

The Honourable Christian Paradis
Minister of International Development and La Francophonie
Government of Canada

Dear Ministers Fast and Paradis:

On behalf of the undersigned Canadian human rights, religious, international development, women's, trade union, investor, teacher, student and community organizations, we are writing to urge the Canadian government to publicly encourage Canadian companies sourcing apparel products from Bangladesh to make generous contributions to the Rana Plaza Donors' Trust Fund, irrespective of whether they had a relationship to a factory in the Rana Plaza building. We also request that the Canadian government offer to match the total contributions to the Fund made by Canadian companies, organizations and institutions.

More than 16 months after the collapse of the Rana Plaza building, in which over 1,100 Bangladeshi garment workers were killed and approximately 2,500 injured, the families of those killed and the workers who suffered debilitating injuries have not yet received the full compensation to which they are entitled and are in desperate need of support.

The governments of seven European countries – the UK, France, Germany, the Netherlands, Italy, Spain and Denmark – released a joint public statement in June of this year calling on retailers and brands in their respective countries to donate generously to the Trust Fund immediately. That statement also calls on the Government of Bangladesh and the Bangladesh Garment Manufacturers' Association (BGMEA) "to increase their contributions and ensure their public accountability."

To their credit, many of the US and European retailers and brands, as well as company foundations, that have made contributions to the Trust Fund to date had no business relationship with garment factories in the Rana Plaza building. As companies sourcing apparel products from Bangladesh, they recognized their shared responsibility for working conditions and safety practices in the Bangladeshi garment industry and the urgent need of the victims and survivors of the Rana Plaza tragedy.

Despite the fact that Bangladesh is a major sourcing destination for most Canadian retailers, only one Canadian retailer – Loblaw (Joe Fresh) – has made a contribution to the Trust Fund to date.

The Rana Plaza Donors' Trust Fund, for which the International Labour Organization (ILO) acts as the sole trustee, was established to provide compensation to the victims and survivors of the tragedy for lost income and medical expenses. As of September 1, the Trust Fund has received less than half the $40 million needed to fully compensate the victims and survivors.

In September and early October, the ILO will distribute the first installment of compensation to the victims and survivors of the Rana Plaza tragedy. It is therefore imperative that there are sufficient monies in the Trust Fund to provide the first installment of compensation to all eligible claimants, and to ensure that there are sufficient additional contributions made in the very near future so that all the eligible claimants can receive the full compensation to which they are entitled.

We appeal to your government to add its voice to those of its European counterparts by publicly encouraging Canadian companies that have apparel products made in Bangladesh to also contribute generously to the Trust Fund immediately, by offering to match those total contributions, and by calling on the Government of Bangladesh and the BGMEA to increase their contributions and ensure their public accountability.

We strongly urge you to act promptly on this critically important request. We look forward to receiving your positive response to our letter.

Yours truly,
